SECURE ROOMS FOR THE SHORT COURSE

Lectures and Demonstrations Under Direction of Purdue Will Be Given Here on Nov. 21-22-23.

MUCH INTEREST IS SHOWN

Committee on Arrangements Held Meeting This Afternoon to Discuss Further Plans.

The committee in charge of the farmers' short course here held a meeting this afternoon to decide upon a number of the details of the arrangements. The committee is composed of a number of farmers and representatives of the commercial club. The Purdue authorities have sent word that the course will be held here on November 21, 22 and 23, and before that time the committee has considerable work which must be done.

From the interest which has been shown in the course it is generally believed that it will be most successful and the attendance will be large. Farmers from all parts of the county have been making inquiries regarding the course and have stated that they are intending to hear most of the lectures and witness the demonstrations. It is probable that some of the district schools will be closed one and possibly two days while the course is in session so the pupils will have an opportunity to attend.

The course will be well advertised throughout the county and also in the adjoining counties. The farmers in Bartholomew county have decided not to hold a course there this year and many of the people of that county who are interested in the proposed course will attend the meetings here. The farmers' institute which is usually held here will not be conducted as the short course will cover much of the same work which is discussed at the institute. The course is given under the direction of Purdue University and it is the custom of that school not to give both the institute and the course in the place the same year.

There will be several cars of stock on exhibit during the course. The committee has already made arrangements for the display of his stock and also for the various lectures and demonstrations.

The First Baptist church has been selected for the lectures. The St. Paul church will be used for the domestic science demonstrations and lectures and the city building has been secured for the horticultural and poultry meetings. The stock will be exhibited at the rear room at the McCoy-Thompson garage on South Chestnut street. Rooms will be secured later for the display of corn and for the exhibit of the dairy cattle.

Tickets will be sold for the various lectures and demonstrations, and a large number have already been placed. It is expected that quite a number of the farmers will attend all the meetings, as the lectures are regarded as very helpful to any farmer who wishes to conduct his farm according to the most progressive principles so that the largest returns can be obtained with the smallest expense.

WHIRLWIND FINISH

Final Touch Will Be Put on Campaign This Week.

This week will practically close the campaign in Jackson county. Party leaders will labor without rest during the next few days in order to complete all the work which is before them. Every part of the county will be invaded with the spell binders of at least one of the parties during the week and the final arguments will be presented, and the "case left with the people."

To hear the ardent supporters of any of the parties talking one unacquainted with campaign would believe that there will be at least three winning candidates for president. Various kinds of bets have been placed during the past few days, and almost any sort of a wager will be taken up.

Funeral Held.

The funeral of Mrs. R. E. Neighbor, wife of Rev. R. E. Neighbor, who died on Thursday, was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her home in Indianapolis.

SENTENCED TO DIE

The Rev. Thurston Vaughan Must Go to the Chair For His Crimes.

Greenville, S. C., Oct. 28.—The Rev. Thurston Vaughan, a prominent and wealthy Baptist minister, has been sentenced to be electrocuted Dec. 1 for ravishing five little girls. Neither Mrs. Vaughan nor his daughter has visited him since he confessed to assaulting the girls.

Vaughan was in charge of the South Carolina Odd Fellows home and the little girls he assaulted were orphans placed in his charge. Vaughan has been prominent in the social and church life of Greenville for years. He was an eloquent preacher and had calls to many churches. Many refused to believe the charges against him until he confessed. He has declared he intends to kill himself and is being constantly watched.

There is no hope for Vaughan unless Governor Blease intercedes and it is not believed he will do so, as public sentiment is strong against the condemned preacher.

Commission's Work Ended.

Washington, Oct. 28.—The president has received the resignation of former Senator Berry of Arkansas as a member of the commission to mark graves of Confederate soldiers in northern cemeteries. Mr. Berry reported to the president that the work of the commission had been completed and that all the graves of the Confederate dead which could be located were marked. The commission, Mr. Berry added, has an unexpended balance of about $51,000.

Almost a Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holselaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. ARRESTED AGAIN

Government Charges MacFarland With Unique Counterfeiting.

New York, Oct. 28.—A. M. MacFarland, who ten days ago, in Newark, was acquitted on a charge of having murdered his wife, has been arrested again, this time by the federal secret service men, who charge him with counterfeiting 50-cent pieces in a rather unique way.

MacFarland first started to copy the silver coins when he was in the Essex county jail waiting to be tried a second time for murder. To while away the time he made molds of tinfoil by rubbing the tinfoil over coins and then filled the mold with candle drippings. He strung these molds up around his cell and the authorities learned of them and decided to watch MacFarland when he came out.

SENATE INQUIRY PROBABLY ENDED

Former Senator Beveridge the Last Witness.

HIS STORY OF CONTRIBUTIONS

On the Witness Stand the Former Senator Tells His Inquisitors How He Came to Hold Generous Contributions of Friends Until the Close of the Campaign in 1904 Before Returning Them to Donors.

Washington, Oct. 28.—With Albert J. Beveridge on the stand, what will probably be the last work of the Clapp senatorial investigating committee failed to reveal any hidden funds contributed to the senator's aid in the 1904 campaign. Mr. Beveridge told of George W. Perkins's gifts, amounting to $30,000, previously testified to; he told of the return of that fund and all others. The former senator told the committee how he had given up his law practice when elected to the senate and how he had lived in Washington solely on his salary as senator and the returns from his magazine writing.

He had not availed himself, he told the committee, of the privileges of franks and passes, even though, at that time, the use of such perquisites was not considered improper.

"I have always paid my own election expenses," said Mr. Beveridge.

Henry C. Starr of Richmond, chairman of the state executive committee of the Indiana Republican state committee in 1904, preceded Beveridge on the stand and confirmed the statements made by previous witnesses regarding the Perkins and other contributions.

Former Senator Beveridge told the story of how two certificates of deposit and one draft, for $10,000 each, came to his office when he was out campaigning in 1904; of how his secretary laid all three before him one day when he returned to Indianapolis.

With these voluntary offerings from Mr. Perkins was a draft for $25,000 from his cousin, Edward L. McLain of Greenfield, O., and a donation of $2,500 from Gifford Pinchot. His first thought, he said, was:

"I can't use this money; I'll return it at once."

Either Tom Shipp or John Hayes, in Senator Beveridge's office, suggested that before he did that it would be best to "see what Rothschild has to say." L. G. Rothschild was sent for. He thought it would be a mistake to return the contributions immediately, as they represented the warm and earnest friendship of the donors, who might be offended by such precipitate action.

Shipp said he believed Rothschild was right—that it would like a case of "heroics." Hayes added his endorsement of the views of Rothschild and Shipp.

"If all you fellows think it is best to hold them for a while, then I guess it is best," said Senator Beveridge, who had faith in his little "kitchen cabinet."

The checks and drafts were sealed in an envelope, put in the vault in his office and held until after election.

This is the whole story of the "mystery" as to why the contributions were not returned immediately.

Mr. Beveridge explained the causes that prompted his three friends to send contributions to him. He said that he and his cousin, Ed McLain, had been closer than brothers ever since they were little boys. He and Perkins, he said, have been the warmest of friends since their young manhood. Mr. Pinchot was the godfather of his daughter, Mr. Perkins the godfather of his son.

After hearing Mr. Beveridge the committee adjourned indefinitely.

Chairman Clapp believes the committee will hold no more hearings until after election.

Since Sept. 30 the committee has been in almost continuous session, with Senators Clapp, Oliver, Paynter and Pomerene conducting the examination of witnesses.

No Trace of Lost Souvenir.

New York, Oct. 28.—It has just come to light that six months ago Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, since then married to Frank H. Jones, a Chicago banker, lost in a hotel here a very valuable emerald ring which had been presented to General Grant by the late emperor of Japan on the occasion of the former president's visit to Japan in 1879. Although detectives have been on a still hunt for the treasure, not the slightest trace of it has been found.

COLONEL TO MAKE BUT ONE ADDRESS

The Doctors Will Permit No Further Exertion.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Very quietly Colonel Roosevelt's fifty-fourth birthday went by Sunday. Only the members of his family sat down to the anniversary dinner. In the morning Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel went to church, leaving the invalid to be looked after by his two sons, Quentin and Theodore, Jr. Several members of Emilie Roosevelt's family came over in the afternoon and Oscar Straus, with Mrs. Straus, motored up the hill at about 3:30 o'clock. They paid a very brief call, although the colonel was insistent that they stay to tea. It had been so generally made known that he was not yet well enough to receive visitors that few disturbed him. Many presents marked the day for the colonel.

It has been given out definitely that the Progressive candidate will not be able to speak in Brooklyn on Saturday night. His strength lacks so much of having completely returned that his physicians insist that he adhere absolutely to their orders. No campaigning save the one speech in New York Wednesday, upon which he is dead set, is their ultimatum.

GOVERNOR WAS WITHIN RIGHTS

Quartering Troops at Race Track Legal.

COURT DENIES INJUNCTION

In Ruling Against the Promoters of the Racing Game at Porter, Judge Tuthill Held That the Courts Could Not Question the Executive Acts of the Governor, Whose Control of the Militia Is Absolute.

Michigan City, Ind., Oct. 28.—An opinion denying to the Racing Foundation Corporation of America an injunction, was rendered by Judge Tuthill of the superior court, thereby sustaining the action of the state authorities in quartering troops at the Porter, Ind., racetrack. The opinion was based on the ground that the courts cannot question the executive acts of the governor.

"The supreme court is authority for the proposition that this court cannot control the act of the national guard in the premises," said Judge Tuthill in rendering his decision. "The twelfth section of Article 5 of the Indiana constitution leaves with the governor the power to call out the militia to enforce the laws when he deems it necessary and refuse to call out the militia when he deems it unnecessary. He is expressly charged and clothed with discretion. His discretion is final, and this court cannot interfere with that discretion without itself violating Article 3 of the same constitution which divided the government into three separate departments—the legislative, the executive, including the administrative, and the judicial."

In answer to the plaintiff's plea that the troops were ordered out when the governor was absent from the state, and that the order was in fact issued by his private secretary, the court said: "It is a well-known rule of law that when the great seal of the state of Indiana is placed upon an instrument, no one can go behind the seal; no inquiry is admissible. So it is with the order of the governor. No court shall inquire when, where or under what circumstances that order was promulgated. It goes forth to every citizen of the state of Indiana and imports absolute verity."

Following the announcement of Judge Tuthill horsemen at the Mineral Springs race course at Porter commenced arrangements for moving their stables to other tracks. President A. F. Knott of the racing association announced that he would appeal the case to the federal court.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

BROTHER DUTTON.

A thin face, high brow, long beard, tousled head, shrewd, kindly eyes—that's Brother Dutton.

For twenty-eight years he has toiled in the leper colony of Molokai.

Molokai, called by Stephen a "bracket in the wall," is a lonely island of the Pacific huddled at the foot of a bleak precipice sheer 2,000 feet high.

Brother Dutton was the assistant to Father Damien, going about caring for the sick, tending, teaching, comforting, during the life of the heroic priest, and when the latter died succeeded him.

For more than a quarter of a century this remarkable man has worked at his task, and now comes the news that he has at last become infected with the loathsome, deadly leprosy and must seal his devotion by a slow and lingering living death.

Dutton served through the civil war, enlisting at Janesville, Wis., and made a gallant record. He won distinction and was promoted to the rank of major.

Shortly following the war he suddenly entered a monastery, where he remained for two years. Disappointment in a love affair is said to have been the reason for his withdrawal from the world.

While in the monastery he heard of the work being done by Father Damien and thereupon dedicated his life to service for the colony.

With that purpose in view he started as an emigrant for San Francisco. From there he shipped for Honolulu, being registered on board ship as a "servant." He says that was "the only occupation he could state."

Brother Dutton is a different type from Father Damien, who was predominantly a spiritual leader.

Dutton is a man of affairs, hearty, wholesome, genial and gifted as an executive, and has been of great assistance to the butt "ends of humanity" who compose the leper settlement.

In 1908 he succeeded in getting the Atlantic fleet, in its trip around the world, to pass close to the leper island and maneuver as a spectacle for the ravished eyes of the unfortunate.

That was a gracious act of our government, which granted Dutton's petition.

And now the brave, helpful brother of the outcasts, beyond the pale with his lepers, is called upon to make the final sacrifice and die the death of a martyr. He is to give the last full measure of devotion to the unclean.

Seldom in the annals of heroic renunciation is there to be found a history of self-sacrifice that will match the ministry of the hero of Molokai.

Every Fifth Baby Dies.

When the boll weevil is discovered in the south we turn the government scientists loose upon it and authorize them to spend heaps of the taxpayers' money in the hope of defending our national cotton crop against its ravages; yet our national baby crop, which amounts to about 2,500,000 little souls every year, we leave to take care of itself! And, as the first fruits of this monstrous policy, one baby in every five dies before it is twelve months old.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TAFT OR WILSON.

On election day the voters of this country will either choose President Taft or Woodrow Wilson for our next president. All that is needed to show this is to look at the figures a few minutes. In 1908 the popular vote for Bryan was 6,409,104 and that for Taft, 7,678,908. In this campaign the Democrats are more closely united than they have been since the Cleveland campaign, so that only a very small per cent. of their vote will go to a third ticket and for every vote which goes to the third ticket, an equal number at least, if not considerably more than an equal number, will go to Mr. Taft from Democrats who wish to see the present prosperous conditions continue. But allowing that a small per cent. of Democrats will vote for a third ticket, it then remains that in order to be elected the third ticket candidates must get fully eight out of every ten votes in the country. The same figures by states show that in Indiana the third ticket must have nine out of every ten Republican votes; in Kansas it must have eight out of every ten; in Illinois, Iowa, North Dakota and New York it must have seven out of every ten; in Missouri it must have nine of every ten; in Pennsylvania and Oregon six out of every ten and so on through the other states in the Union.

Any man who has observed conditions at all knows that such a percentage is out of the question. In most of the counties where there is the strongest third party sentiment, not more than a third of the Republican vote has declared itself for a third ticket while in many other counties there is so little third party sentiment that not even a county ticket has been nominated. So on the whole the number of Republican voters, who will support a third ticket are considerably smaller than is indicated in the strongest third party counties.

With practically no votes from the Democratic party for the third ticket because what votes do go to a third party are offset by votes going to the Republican ticket and with so small a percentage of the Republican votes going to a third ticket, it is absolutely certain that the third party candidates do not have the slightest chance of winning this election. The contest then narrows down to the contest between the Republican and Democratic candidates and it remains for the voters of this country to determine between Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson; between a continuance of the present prosperous conditions and a return to the panic times which followed the election of a democratic administration twenty years ago; between these times when every man who wants work can secure it and the time which many will recall when thousands of men over the country were without work and without means for supporting their families; between the continuance of our present conservative and well-balanced constitutional government and the radical populistic ideas which have been espoused recently by men, seeking votes in order to gratify their own personal ambition.

A vote for President Taft is a vote for a continuance of republican principles of government, and this means prosperity.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FISH ON TOAST.

FOR delicate stomachs the dishes mentioned here will be just what is needed. They will be useful for Friday's luncheon or supper in families where meat is dispensed with that day. Moreover, they are so delicious that they will be appreciated by any lover of good fish daintily served.

Oyster Toast.—Take a cupful of oyster liquor. Scald it and strain it, then set aside to cool, add half a cupful of cream or milk with a tablespoonful of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Heat to the scalding point and pour over slices of toasted bread. Place in the oven five minutes and then cover with oysters broiled a crisp brown on a hot griddle well greased with bacon fat. Serve hot.

Caviar Toast.—Put a tablespoonful of butter and a minced onion into a saucepan on the fire. Stir until the whole is well heated, then turn in a little pot of Russian caviar. When this is hot add half a cupful of strained tomato sauce with a few drops of strained lemon juice. When very hot serve on slices of buttered toast.

Inexpensive Dishes.

Mock Crab-Toast.—Take one pound of grated cheese, a small spoonful of anchovy sauce, of made mustard and of vinegar, a pinch of pepper, a little salt, the yolks of two eggs, a tablespoonful of butter. Mix thoroughly and serve cold on squares of brown bread or else pour the mixture on buttered toast and bake for eight minutes till it is all nicely colored.

Fish Toast.—Use for this any white fish that you prefer. Remove the skin and bones and pound it to a paste in a mortar. When it is quite smooth add a few drops of anchovy sauce, a little curry powder, a small quantity of lemon juice and a dust of celery salt. If the fish is inclined to be stingy the mixtures should be rubbed through a wire sieve. Heat it in a saucepan with a little lump of butter and when it is quite hot spread it on rounds of toast. Serve hot.

Caviar Toast.—Put a tablespoonful of butter and a minced onion into a saucepan on the fire. Stir until the

DON'T NEGLECT CATARRH

Even in its early stages Catarrh is a most distressing complaint, known by its symptoms of stuffy feeling in the head and nose, roaring in the ears, mucus in the throat, difficult breathing, etc. When the blood becomes thoroughly polluted with catarrhal matter the inflammation extends to the bronchial tubes, causing hoarseness and often an aggravating cough, the stomach is affected, resulting in dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and gradually all the mucous membranes of the body become diseased.

Catarrh is a deep-seated blood disease and must be treated constitutionally; it is beyond the reach of local treatment. Only temporary relief can ever be had from the use of sprays, washes, etc. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter and at the same time building up the entire system. It goes down into the circulation and removes all impurities. Then as pure, nourishing blood circulates through the body, the inflamed membranes heal, all discharges cease and every symptom of Catarrh passes away. Don't neglect Catarrh; cure it with S. S. S. as thousands have done. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free.

MRS. CARTER HARRISON

Wife of Chicago's Mayor Writes Frontier Romance.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Edith Ogden Harrison, wife of Chicago's mayor whose contributions to juvenile literature have endeared her to the hearts of thousands of young people, has published a new novel, a romance of the Canadian frontier.

CLEAN UP!

Strong Appeal Goes Out From Federation of Women's Clubs.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 26.—Improved housing and better sanitary conditions in the slums of the cities of Indiana are two matters that occupied the attention of the annual state convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs, in this city.

Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon of Evansville, who has made an investigation of the insanitary homes in some of the cities, made a plea for the support of the housing bill before the next general assembly, and Dr. Charles P. Emerson of Indiana university, spoke from a hygienic standpoint and asked for more water, more sunshine and more pure air.

"The medical profession has shown you how tuberculosis must be treated," said Dr. Emerson to the convention, "and now the matter rests in the hands of the people themselves. Cleanliness, which includes not only water but fresh air and sunshine, is the only thing that will save more than 110,000 people in our country every year."

Social evils were discussed by Dr. Emerson, who said there is little use of building homes for the blind and insane when these evils exist.

Mrs. Bacon held the attention of a large audience as she told of conditions in the slums of the cities, when she made an appeal for the housing bill. "The fundamental vital principle on housing reform is that every house that is occupied shall be sanitary, fit and safe for habitation. Isn't that simple? Who could ask less, who for shame, could be willing to grant less—that our houses should be sanitary? That they shall not kill the people who rent them, nor make them sick," said Mrs. Bacon.

Auto Crashed Into Streetcar.

Indianapolis, Oct. 26.—Albert F. Haller, dean of the Indianapolis College of Pharmacy, and Earl Haller, ten years old, his son, were killed and Mrs. Haller and a five-year-old daughter were perhaps fatally injured when an automobile in which they were riding collided head-on with a streetcar on Central avenue between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets last evening.

Got His Money's Worth.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 26.—J. D. Collins, millionaire ice cream manufacturer of Chicago, laughed when he paid a fine of $11 in court here, declaring it is worth $11 to drive his automobile forty miles an hour on a bright fall morning.

The Union Not Recognized.

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 26.—One thousand miners who have been on strike since last spring, returned to work in the mines at Dorothy, W. Va., after a long conference with the operators. Three mines are affected. The men are to receive 22 per cent above the price paid under the scale of the United Mine Workers of America, but the operators do not recognize the union.

Murder Remains a Mystery.

Noblesville, Ind., Oct. 26.—Coroner Hanna filed his report in the case of Erastus Ballhymmer, who was found dead two weeks ago at his home on a farm near the line between Marion and Hamilton counties. The coroner's verdict is that Ballhymmer came to his death from an injury on the head, the result of a blow by a blunt instrument. The condition of the body indicated that Ballhymmer had been dead several days when the body was discovered.

State's Suit Withdrawn.

Indianapolis, Oct. 26.—The state has withdrawn its suit for a permanent injunction against the promoters of the Mineral Springs racetrack at Porter. The state officials decided to take this action on the ground that the militia at the track has accomplished what the judicial proceedings sought to do,

MIXED REPORTS ARE CONFUSING

Balkan War Stories Keep the Reader Guessing.

RUMORS CLOUD THE FACTS

Among These Rumors Is One Crediting the Turks With the Recapture of Strategic Point Near Adrianople and Another Giving Moslems Credit For Victory in Battle Near There in Which 16,000 Bulgars Were Slain.

London, Oct. 26.—The Turks have retaken Kirk-Kilisseh, which fell to the Bulgars Thursday after three days of the hottest sort of fighting, according to a persistent rumor in Constantinople.

There comes word also from the Turkish capital that a great battle has been fought at Kadikoi, northwest of Adrianople, where 16,000 Bulgarians were killed. The Turkish losses are admitted to have been large. The Turks say they captured a number of Bulgarian officers and men and some guns. The date when the battle was fought is not given.

The Bulgarians are said to have taken Nevrekop, on the way from Sofia to the sea. The Turkish minister of war in an interview says that it is probable that Scutari may fall to the Montenegrins, but its capture is of little importance. He says that Turkey will punish Montenegro as soon as she is done with Servia and Bulgaria.

The Servians have taken Buschit and Gilan in the march south from Novibazar upon Uskub.

A Turkish battleship which had been in the bombardment of Varna came to Constantinople for repairs. There had been an explosion aboard.

The report that Mukhtar Pasha, the Turkish commander at Kirk-Kilisseh, was killed, is not true. His son was captured by the victorious Bulgars.

The Montenegrins have turned captured Turkish guns on Scutari and the bombardment of that place is expected. Montenegrin emissaries have entered the town to demand its capitulation, and the Turks have withdrawn their garrison to the heights of Zadrina. This is thought to be the first move toward evacuation.

Astounding Charge Against a Philadelphian.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—When Eddeson F. Ellsworth was arraigned before Magistrate Beaton on a charge of embezzling $200 on a warrant sworn out by the Home Insurance company, an astounding story of bigamy and crime was told. It was testified by city detectives that Ellsworth has at least ten wives in different parts of the country, including several in this city. He was held in $500 bail for court.

Ellsworth originally came from Riverside, Cal. His first alleged illegal matrimonial venture was at Frederick Md., where he is said to have a wife and two children. He is said to have deserted this wife in 1902. He then went to North Cortright, N. Y., then to Norwich, N. Y., to Deposit, N. Y., to Baltimore, to Frederick, Md., to Philadelphia, to Easton, Pa., to Bangor, Pa., to Philadelphia again, to Pittsburgh and then back to Philadelphia, where he was arrested on the embezzlement charge. The police declare that he has wives living in each of these towns. When arrested here he was living with the latest Mrs. Ellsworth. She says she will stick to him.

ANAEMIC PEOPLE

Need More Iron in the Blood

If you are anaemic, you need more iron in your blood, and the tell-tale symptoms are a pale face,—colorless lips, ashen finger nails, poor circulation, and short breath, and more serious diseases are easily contracted when in this condition.

What Vinol did for Mrs. G. S. Manuel, of San Antonio, Texas, it will do for every anaemic run-down person. She says: "I was weak and nervous and had general debility for about three years. My health was badly run down and my complexion became sallow and badly affected with pimples. While in this weakened condition, I contracted pleurisy, which made it very hard for me. I am happy to say that Vinol has restored me to health again, and I have no cough or soreness of the lungs at all."

We ask every anaemic or run-down weak person in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim. The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Thomas.

Mr. Graffenreid Thomas, private detective for the insurance company which had issued policies aggregating two hundred thousand dollars on Natalie's jewels, snapped a pair of handcuffs on the Duc de Trouville—poor little duke; I had begun to like him, too!—then turned to John and Hap, who stood looking on, and drew a cigar from pocket of his livery.

"With your permission, gentlemen, I'll smoke," he remarked pleasantly. "I've been a servant in this house all summer and I haven't dared to..."

"Go ahead!" John invited, and he wasn't in the least surprised. You simply can't surprise John about anything.

"If I had stopped to think I might have known you were a detective or something," said Hap. "You're the worst footman I ever saw."

It was just about that moment that Mrs. Hazard and I came in, panting. We had fairly raced from my sitting-room, leaving the nurse and Doctor Graham with Jo. Laura had gone to the telephone, and—I'll give you three guesses who it was she had called! Winthrop! Right the first time.

Mrs. Hazard stared at Thomas in his immaculate livery, smoking, actually smoking! And at the poor little handcuffed duke.

"Thomas!" she reproved sharply. Then seeing that the scheme of the world was awry: "What has happened?"

"You see it's like this, mother," I explained cheerfully, and I think he was actually glad about the poor little duke, "Thomas isn't a footman at all; he's a detective for the insurance company. It seems His Grace here"—and he indicated His Grace—"has been stealing our pictures, and Natalie's jewelry, and—"

"The duke!" exclaimed Mrs. Hazard, "stealing pictures! What pictures?" She gave a quick look about the gallery. "None of them is missing?"

"It was substitution, Mrs. Hazard," the detective told her. "I don't know just how it was done, but they have been taking away the originals of the paintings here and leaving you copies. That Van Dyke up there, for instance, doesn't even look like a Van Dyke to me, and I don't know much about art. An examination will probably reveal the fact that all of the most valuable of the pictures have already been taken." He paused a moment. "It just so happens that I came in here a moment ago and found the duke at work. He shot at me; and the result was as you see."

The skies had fallen! Our duke, the bright particular star of our summer, whom everybody had angled for, a thief, and in chains—well not chains exactly, but handcuffs. His Grace was silent; not a word had he spoken since we entered the room. He didn't speak now, he just sat there chewing his mustache violently. There was a glimmer of defiance in his eyes. It suddenly flashed on me where and when I had first seen him—an impression I had had from the beginning. Count Felix von Brunner had pointed him out to Jo and me at the Spring Exhibition. He had called him a scoundrel instead of the Duc de Trouville. And that's why the name was not familiar to me.

There was a rush of footsteps in the hall, and Adams, the other detective, appeared in the doorway. "Mr. Adams," Thomas directed, "please be good enough to see that Mrs. Cutler doesn't leave the house. You understand?" Adams merely nodded, and ran out.

"And Natalie's jewels!" Mrs. Hazard went on, after a moment. "To state it briefly," Thomas said, "it is possible to trace all the thefts and robberies along the north shore during this whole summer to the duke here, and Mrs. Cutler and the Duc d'Aubigny, who has already served a sentence of several years in a French prison. It was a big conspiracy, and we don't know yet the extent of its ramifications. We do know, however, that while the duke came here as your guest to steal these pictures, by substitution, as I have explained, he has been working hand in hand with d'Aubigny in the jewel thefts. Mrs. Cutler has been the actual instrument in many of the thefts. I have known these things vaguely for a long time, but it was necessary to get direct proof, and now I believe I have that."

"For instance, in the case of Miss Agazziz's jewels. Since she has been in this house she has lost first a ruby pendant, then six bracelets, another pendant and a rope of pearls. In my capacity of footman here I kept close watch of Mrs. Cutler, and after each theft I had searched her rooms. In no case did I find any jewels. But I did find, on my last trip to her apartments, a receipt in the name of the Duc de Trouville for a box in a safety deposit vault. I coupled that with the fact that Mrs. Cutler has always found it convenient to go into the city immediately after the thefts here, and I made inquiries, or rather some of my men did for me.

"They found that Mrs. Cutler had gone to the safety deposit vault time after time and each time she had deposited something in the box. If I am not mistaken, the various stolen jewels, including the emerald bracelet which was stolen from Miss Agazziz before you opened your summer place here, are in that vault, and the box is held in the name of the Duc de Trouville. I think that is direct evidence. You're a lawyer, Mr. Crowningshield. Am I right?"

"If the jewels are in the vault—!"

John spread his hands, indicating that that was all there was to be said. "The thieving, so far as this house was concerned, came to a climax when it became generally known that a detective, this man Adams, was coming here," Thomas continued. "The duke here, Mrs. Cutler and their accomplices undertook them to make the big haul. It was Miss Codman's good fortune—he turned to me and bowed slightly—to prevent the accomplishment of that haul; and incidentally it was my misfortune to cause her to break her arm. It was I who flashed the light in your face and called you by name the night you went headlong down the stairs," he apologized. "I had followed you in the dark under the impression that you were Mrs. Cutler, and when I flashed the light in your face it was with the purpose of taking a prisoner. Instead of Mrs. Cutler, however, I came upon you; and you fell. I'm sorry."

"Oh, don't mention it," I gasped excitedly. "It is of no consequence at all." Then another thought came to

"And now, de Trouville," continued Thomas, "wasn't that an awful way to speak to a duke?" "There remains only to get an order from you for the jewels in the safety deposit. For your information I'll say that d'Aubigny and two of his accomplices are already ready under arrest in the city, and Mrs. Cutler is being detained upstairs. It's all off. Give up. It remains, too, for Mrs. Hazard here to say what shall be done with you—after all the stolen things are recovered. I'm satisfied to get them. I'll send you to prison for twenty years if she wants me to, or I think I can induce my people to let you go."

"That seemed to be all of it. Mrs. Hazard and I sat looking at each other with our mouths mutually open, and simultaneously we closed them. John said nothing; Hap sat pounding one clenched fist into the palm of his hand and grinning—I don't know why.

"And now, de Trouville," continued Thomas, "wasn't that an awful way to speak to a duke?" "There remains only to get an order from you for the jewels in the safety deposit. For your information I'll say that d'Aubigny and two of his accomplices are already ready under arrest in the city, and Mrs. Cutler is being detained upstairs. It's all off. Give up. It remains, too, for Mrs. Hazard here to say what shall be done with you—after all the stolen things are recovered. I'm satisfied to get them. I'll send you to prison for twenty years if she wants me to, or I think I can induce my people to let you go."

"For the first time the duke spoke.

"I am at your mercy, Mrs. Hazard," he said. "I deny nothing." And he didn't have the least bit of an accent!

Hap looked at Mrs. Hazard. Mrs. Hazard looked at John. John looked at the duke, and the duke looked at me—appealingly, I thought. Jo and I really were the cause of his downfall! Poor little duke! I was awfully sorry for him!

"I think, under all the circumstances," John said slowly at last, for he was holding on to his temper—he was awfully angry about Jo being abducted—"that if His Grace returns everything that has been stolen—I think we are prepared to let the matter drop." I could have kissed him for that. "He has been called to Europe suddenly, and he will decide to remain there for all time!"

"And the others?" Thomas queried.

"If either is brought to trial the effect will be the same."

"I mean all of them," said John. And that's how that part of it ended.

(To be concluded)

me. "And you didn't suspect me of the thefts?" He smiled and shook his head.

"Nor Mr. Abbott," he added. "Our insurance people keep pretty close record of family jewels of every kind, and we knew from the very beginning that Mr. Abbott owned the jewels the police found there."

"We were going to prove it, too," John put in. "That was so simple we didn't have to worry about it." Now why hadn't he told us before? Think of the heartburnings and the petty suspicions he could have pre-

"As I say, I knew these things, but it wasn't wise to tell them," Thomas continued. "In the first place, as long as the real thieves imagined some one else was under suspicion it was easier to keep watch on them. I followed that line of reasoning throughout. Everything else was comparatively simple after that extraordinary session at dinner"—again he smiled—"where every one told their schemes for hiding their jewels. If I had had any doubts at all they were dissipated then. The persons who heard those statements were only the guests in the house and three servants. Bur-

UNITY IN RELIGION LATEST MOVEMENT

Morgan Provides Fund to Set the Thing Going.

New York, Oct. 28.—The universal movement looking toward world unity in religion has received impetus with the payment of a contribution of $100,000 by J. P. Morgan as a basis, and its founders look for a much quicker carrying out of their plan for an international conference than they had hoped for. The idea was born in the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States at Cincinnati in October, 1910, and the Rev. Dr. W. T. Manning, rector of Trinity chapel, brought it forward.

The fact that Mr. Morgan had contributed such a large sum to the movement was not generally known until Sunday, when Alfred W. Martin, associate leader of the Society for Ethical Research, made the announcement in an address before the society.

Mr. Morgan is a member of the general commission of the Episcopal church and associated with him on that body, of which the Rev. C. P. Anderson of Chicago is president, are Bishop Rhinelander of Pennsylvania, Seth Low, George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, Francis Lynde Stetson Samuel Mather of Cleveland and George Zabriskie of New York, who is treasurer.

The most recent recruit to the world conference idea is Cardinal Gibbons. His support has greatly encouraged the commission. This action on his part will, it is believed, result in the appointment to the joint commission of representatives of the Catholic church in America.

CONFESS EUGENICS A PUZZLE

Modern Scientists. Arrogant as They Have Become, Admit That Subject Is Beyond Them.

Already the professors of eugenics are mollifying their views. They are confessing that it is yet too early to lay down any laws of heredity, so far as human beings are concerned, and that many years—perhaps generations—must be spent in merely accumulating facts before any laws can be formulated. As the Medical Record says, all our older learning concerning heredity must be submitted to Mendelian tests.

It appears at the outset, says the Medical Record, "that families, like individuals, do not bear prosperity well, and deteriorate as their material resources improve, and also that the menace of the unfit is not so great as it might at first thought seem, because here the death rate in the resulting progeny is phenomenally high."

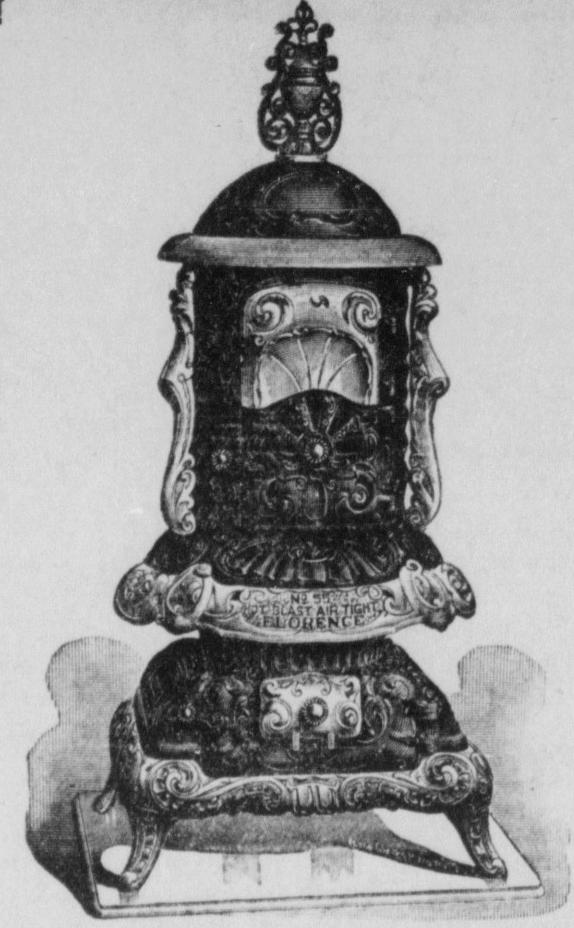

Nature has an excellent way of holding the balance even and there are thoughtful men of science who view with misgiving the efforts of philanthropists to upset the plan of nature by preventing the early death of the unfit.

In the second June number of Popular Science, the editor sounds a warning against "irresponsible eugenists," and says: "We believe that we can breed out feeble-mindedness, because that is simple, but we know that we cannot produce genius by any system, not even if we could treat mankind as Mendel treated peas, because genius is complicated and proportionately beyond our control."
